ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.--The author is indebted to the late Anton Kraemer, Ingelheim, Germany, for his advice, guidance and encouragement, to Mathias Egler, Muenchen, Germany and Werner Weissmueller, Bad Saulgau, Germany for aid in acquiring data and to Susan Clarkson, Mt. Pleasant, Michigan for helpful suggestions. Much important Setschan KB data was exchanged with Karl Benz, Bakowa data with Reinholdt Lovasz and Tschestereg data with Roswitha Egert. The author is indebted to Kimberley Dunkle for much data on Banaters in Castor, AB Canada. Further thanks go to Walter Friesenhahn, Josef Frank and Herbert Mayer, among others, for data exchange. Thanks go to the many Banat list subscribers who unknowing supplied family data over the years which was stored away until this work. Special thanks are due to Josef Michels for providing post 1900 Josefsdorf records.

I. ELISENHAIN-JOSEFSDORF-NORTH DAKOTA FAMILY REGISTER, 1872-1990, WITH FILIAL, KISZETO, BELINT AND GR TOPLOWETZ

HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION, DIE ALTE HEIMAT; ULMBACH-SETSCHAN-ELISENHAIN-JOSEFSDORF

Among the various turn-of-the-century immigrant homesteaders to Southwestern North Dakota were a group of Germans from Hungary who came from the pre World War I Hungarian province of the Banat. These German-Hungarians or more conveniently, Banaters, homesteaded largely in Stark and Hettinger counties with a lesser number located in Western Morton Co. About 20 % of these North Dakota homesteaders came from a single Banat village, Josefsdorf. The chain of events leading to the foundation of Josefsdorf is closely connected with events in the Southern Banat---in the marches of the Banat Military Frontier. The Banat Military Frontier was populated by militia farmers, or Grenzers, who manned the outposts along the Danube from which they could observe the OttomanTurks across the river as well as to enforce quarantine restrictions designed to prevent the introduction of plague from Turkish controlled areas. These outposts and observation points also formed a protective screen against possible Turkish raids from across the river.

These Germans from Hungary were originally one of several ethnic groups recruited by the Austrian government to colonize the Banat in the middle decades of the 18th century after it had been conquered from the Turks. At that time, the Banat was largely a depopulated swampy wasteland. In the ensuing century this population of Donau Schwabs, as they were eventually labeled, began to outgrow the readily available cultivable land.

In the century from 1788-1888, the Donauschwaben population of the Banat grew from 75,000 to 510,000. Until 1867 estates among Banaters were passed down by the system of primogeniture, intact to the oldest son. Younger sons were paid a settlement from the estate. This expanding agrarian population created pressure to found new townsites through internal migration and bring further farmland into production in order to provide a livelihood for the younger sons. Since the best lands had been taken up in the earlier settlement period this led to the founding of further farming settlements on less desirable sites.

The Reidland was the low lying flood plain in the SW corner of the Banat at the mouths of the Bega and Theiss. The swampy condition of the Reidland region largely resulted from silting at the mouth of the Bega where it emptied into the Theiss and, in turn, where the Theiss emptied into the Donau. The Reidland fell under the authority of the Banat Military Frontier and was under Austrian military administration. The remainder of the Banat, the Civil Banat or "the Provential", at this time was administrated by Hungary.

Further settlements in the Military Frontier were authorized by the Reichskriegsministerium in Vienna and the "Temeswarer Militaerkommando" in 1868. This action resulted in the founding of the "Marsh Settlements" of Giselahain, a daughter settlement of Mollydorf, Elisenhain, a daughter settlement of Setschan, Rudolfsgnad a daughter settlement of Etschka, Albrechtendorf, Koenigsdorf, Ivanovo and Gyorgyevo. The latter two were non Schwab villages.

According to an account left by Adelbert Trendler, the justice of Elisenhain and leader in the founding of Josefsdorf. Elisenhain was settled in 1869 by 200 German families mainly coming from Setschan. In turn, Setschan was a daughter settlement comprising mainly families coming from Ulmbach. Administratively these Elisenhain Grenzers came under the authority of the XII Deutsch-Banater Grenz Regiment based in Pantschowa. In 1872 the Banat Military Frontier was disbanded and the area transferred from Austrian to Hungarian civil control.

The repeated flooding and subsequent abandonment of Elisenhain and Giselahain leading to the establishment of Josefsdorf and Giseladorf respectively are well documented cases of Banat internal migration.

The conditions leading to the settlement of Josefsdorf and Giseladorf illustrate the difficult times many families in these villages went through. A number of the Josefsdorf families resettled a number of times following a route from Ulmbach to Setschan, to Elisenhain, to finally Josefsdorf and on to a new home on the American prairies of North Dakota. These families came from low lying districts along the Theiss, Bega and Temesch rivers where they lost all their possessions repeatedly through flooding. Elisenhain was located in a vast marshland subject to flooding near the confluence of the Bega and Theiss rivers. This site was adjacent to where the Theiss emptied into the Donau. Moreover, flooding on the Donau could back water up the Theiss and thus create flooding conditions along it's lower reaches even though there were no unusual weather conditions in the watersheds on the upper Theiss or Bega.

In order to protect the newly founded Elisenhain from flooding a 2.5 Km long dike, 5 M high was constructed before any houses were built. In addition, to protect fields and crops from flooding, a second 12.5 Km long dike over 5 M in height was also constructed. Of course, this was all done without the aid of machinery. Scarcely had the town been established when floods breached the newly constructed dike and the inhabitants suffered extensive losses. As a result, the dike was widened and extended to a height of 6.5 M. In those years of no flooding (1873-1875) the Elisenheimers achieved record crops on the rich alluvial soils. Further catastrophic flooding occurred in the Spring of 1876, when the Elisenhainers lost everything, their possessions were swept away and the inhabitants were impoverished. The Elisenhainers were forced to find refuge in the neighboring village of Etschka.

The repeated flooding of Elisenhain and other poorly sited Reidland villages at the mouths of the Theiss and Bega caused the inhabitants, under the leadership of Adelbert Trendler, to petition the authorities in Gr Betschkerek and Temeswar for relocation to a more secure site less subject to flooding hazards. The Elisenhainers particularly wanted a new location which would not be subjected to flooding. Eventually a new site to the East of Temeswar was laid out with 315 homesites and was given the name Josefsdorf. The Elisenhainers drew lots for their new homesites and the first settlers departed Elisenhain 6 Mar 1882. The first group arrived at the new site of Josefsdorf on 12 March but the process of moving extended into late fall. Some families moved by loading their possessions onto barges and went up the Bega canal as far as Temeswar and from there to Josefsdorf by wagon. Others made the entire move by wagon. The new houses were constructed, as were those of most Banat settler houses, of tamped earth. Loads of reeds were brought from the swamps of their old home to thatch the roofs of their newly built houses. Tamped earth construction was a long standing technique among Banaters and it was not a new task for the Josefsdorfers since they had employed exactly the same process in the settlement of Elisenhain some 12 years previously as well as in the frequent rebuilding of Elisenhain after each flooding episode.

A new village of Elisenhain, later reconstructed (1883-1889) on the old site, was more secure because the channels of the Bega and Theiss had been dredged allowing for better drainage during flooding conditions. It was resettled by ca 175 Slovak families and 46 German families which had returned after the flooding.

The founding of Giseldorf in 1882, by the relocation of Giselahain, another town frequently flooded out, has many parallels with the establishment of Josefsdorf. Mollydorf was founded in 1832 by inhabitants from Charleville, Seultour, St Hubert, Masstort, Heufeld, Hatzfeld and Tschestereg. In turn, 200 Mollydorf families in 1868 settled Giselahain. Giselahain was sited on low lying, swampy, ground between the Donau and Temesch rivers. As in the case of Elisenhain it was necessary to construct dikes for protection against flooding from the Donau. In the year 1869, when no flooding occurred, crop yields were 4-5 times greater than in Mollydorf due to the rich alluvial soils of the area. Dike construction was slow and inadequate so that in March of 1870 Giselahain, as well as other nearby villages, Koenigsdorf and Marienfeld were completely flooded. The inhabitants took refuge in neighboring villages. The reconstructed Giselahain was relocated on slightly higher ground. Since a number of families did not return, the reconstruction Giselahain contained only 190 families.

In spite of the higher location, and rebuilt dikes, in March of 1880 flooding again destroyed Giselahain. Only four houses and the school remained standing. As in the case of Elisenhain, the Giselahainers, after much consideration and false starts, were given a new townsite far from possible flooding-----present day Giseldorf. Like nearby Josefsdorf, Giseldorf was founded in 1882 and many of the problems faced by the settlers at these new sites were similar.

In a similar fashion the marsh settlement of Koenigsdorf was abandoned after disastrous flooding and the inhabitants in 1880 returned to their place of origin, Stefensfeld. Flooding on the Theiss also swept away the major upstream city of Szeged in March of 1879.

The constant flooding threat of the Grenz gemeinde at the mouth of the Bega and Theiss forms the central events in Adam Mueller-Guttenbrum's epic Heimat novel "Die Glocken der Heimat". This "Meisterwerk" is a fitting memorial to the Riedlandbauern of the K. u K. Militatergrenzen. The title of the work reminds us of the role the church bells played when they were rung as an alarm in the middle of the night to warn the villagers of breaks in the dike and the necessity of fleeing from the rushing flood waters. The villagers fled with their families through the rising water to higher ground in wagons or in river boats.

In their new home of Josefsdorf the Elisenhainers had to take up a new battle with another difficult environment---poor, dry clay soils and the lack of potable surface water. This low water table necessitated the construction of an extensive deep well system throughout the village of Josefsdorf. The land assigned to Josefsdorf was cutover stump land which had to be cleared before farming operations could begin. The terrain in the new home was largely unsuited for field crops and the poor soils of the new site gave yields half that experienced in their previous home of Elisenhain.

The new site of Josefsdorf with its unfavorable farming conditions left most settlers discouraged. Many sold out and left for a more secure life in America. Their places offered for sale at reasonable prices attracted buyers from across the Banat. When these newcomers, in turn, became discouraged with the difficult farming conditions they too left for North America. Thus a large number of immigrants were cycled through Josefsdorf to the New World. Departures to ND tended to concentrate in the years 1892-3, 1897-1898 and 1905. The departures from Josefsdorf were of such magnitude that a population of 1311 in the 1910 census fell to 935 in 1920(falling further until 1933 there were 761 inhabitants), so that many places stood empty and the houses decayed. Initially most Josefsdorfers to the New World settled in North Dakota but many later immigrants post 1903 chose Philadelphia. With the passage of time a few families drifted back from Josefsdorf to their old home of the rebuilt Elisenhain. In 1887 there were 46 German Elisenhain families which had returned after the flooding.

THE BANAT CHURCH BOOKS

The Banat church books were microfilmed just before World War II. This was part of a project to determine the place of origin of the original colonists to the Banat. The church books were microfilmed only so far as the time covered by living original settlers still present in the village. The particular book which had data on the last colonist was completed but no subsequent books for that locality were filmed. Since this varied from place to place the filming period is not uniform for all localities. For most localities the filming ended in the 3rd and 4th decades of the 19th century. These microfilm are available from the Family History Library(FHL) in Salt Lake, the library of the Institut fuer Auslandsbeziehungen in Stuttgart or the library of the new Donau Schwaben museum in Ulm. As a result of this selective filming, most Banat researchers are faced with a record gap since their hand-me-down family knowledge does not extend far enough back and overlap with the available church book records. The difficulty of bridging this record gap is the most frustrating aspect of Banat family history research. The bulk of the original church books for the Romanian Banat have been deposited in the archives in Temeswar. Church books for the villages in the neighborhood of Arad will be found in the Arad archives.

Microfilm copies of the Josefsdorf church books, 1882-1898, were obtained from the Romanian Central Archives in Bucharest. Records for the years 1898 and 1899 were obtained through the good offices of Mathias Egler.

From 1882, when Josefsdorf was established, to 1888, when the church was completed, the records of Josefsdorfers can be found under the neighboring parish of Rekasch. After 1888 Josefsdorf became its own parish and its church books were kept independently. The case of Giseladorf is more complex. From 1882, when Giseladorf was established, to 1886 there were no official church services in Giseladorf. In 1886 church services began using the schoolhouse. Services were held as follows;

1882-1889	Pfarrer Nikolaus Stivrich from Brestowatz
1886-1888	Pfarrer Gustav Stary from Brestowatz
1888-1892	Pfarrer Michael Annau from Josefsdorf
1892-1903	Pfarrer Gustav Stary from Josefsdorf

Construction of a church in Giseladorf was started in the Spring of 1908 and finished one year later. Even though the church was completed, the parish was still serviced by the priest(Lind) from Josefsdorf. In 1912 Giseladorf obtained its own priest, Gustav Dietl from Gr. Kikinda. Thus, to thoroughly research Giseladorfers, one would have to search the church books of both nearby Brestowatz and Josefsdorf.

In recent years the Temeswar archives have become much more accessible and it is possible to film KBs on site with a digital camera.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DATA

In this work the Josefsdorf church book and some civil registration records have been abstracted for the period 1882 to 1990, Elisenhain birth records 1872-1882 were hand copied from the original records in the Gr Betschkerek archives and the data organized according to families. These records are especially complete and generally give the place of birth or origin of the principals. As a result they are a wealth of information on turn of the century internal migration in the Banat and when tied into migration data to North America and the North Dakota records compliment the picture of Banat settlement in North Dakota. House numbers(HN) have been given in this summary and researchers can determine their location by consulting the ortspland of Josefsdorf at the end of this work or in Michels.

North Dakota families were reconstructed using ship passenger records, Federal census records, World Connect databases at rootsweb.com, Social Security Death Index, also at rootsweb, World War I draft registration, DeutschUngarisch Familien-Kalender subscription lists, North Dakota, California Washington, Oregon and Montana death indexes, Stark County marriage records, Ancestry family trees, ND county Centennial books, Richardton and Lefor church book abstractions. The published sources are given in the references. Data taken from such sources will contain the usual errors associated with such secondary sources. One special aspect of this family register is the integration of the available Setschan KB data generously supplied by Karl Benz. This supports and documents the movement of many families from Setschan to Josefsdorf, frequently by way of Eisenhain. A firmer foundation is thus provided for one of the major cases of Banat internal migration in the last half of the 19th century.

For those Josefsdorf families which were among the original settlers coming from Elisenhain the date of the founding of Elisenhain can be an important landmark since Josefsdorfers born before 1870 would have to be actually born in another locality, usually Setschan. Setschan was founded in 1805 through internal migration with all or most of the initial families coming from Ulmbach. One can track the progress of many Ulmbach surnames through Setschan to Elisenhain to Josefsdorf and on to North Dakota. Among these families are Grassel, Koppel, Probst, Raaber, Rettinger, Sabath, Seher, Streitmatter, Schlitter, Wagner, Feimer, Werth and Mersdorf. These Ulmbach families first moved to Setschan and then to Elisenheim. When the Elisenheim site was abandoned they moved to Josefsdorf and subsequently homesteaded in North Dakota. von Moeller lists the following Elisenhain families living in Josefsdorf in 1923; Trendler, Meissner, Descho, Schmidt, Schulz, Gerger, Weber, Schoernig, Bergmann, Brucker, Friedrich, Koellmel, Mayer, Grassl, Militz, Werth, Mertler, Merschorf, Klein, Schlitter, Probst, Bartl, Betschner, Pfeiffer, Neusatz, Keller, Hinding, Gaschna, Nagl, Magori, Lutz, Mertler, Streitmatter and Kirch.

In compiling the following summary most of the surnames have been deMagyarized. This was done in order to make comparisons easier with various ND databases of these families. Birth and death data which give only the year were calculated from the age given in death, marriage records or taken from North Dakota tombstone records. Because of the short time period covered by these records, a numbering system found in most works of this type, used to relate families to one another, has not been employed but families are simply given in alphabetical order.

There were a few small gaps in the church book data. The largest gap is 1917-1919 Josefsdorf marriage records. Several other minor gaps were caused when the microfilm camera operator turned two pages at the same time. Not all places of origin in the records could be matched with current localities. Those which are still uncertain are followed by a question mark. So far as possible, all European place names are given as their German variants.

Lung has recently published a Familienbuch for Etschka, Sigmundfeld and Rudolfsgnad. This volume is a complimentary fit to much of the Josefsdorf KB data and allows one to track many Josefsdorf and North Dakota families back for some generations. Equally useful is the Setschan family book by Karl Benz and, in spite of some gaps in the Setschan data one cannot but be impressed by the close fit of the Josefsdorf and Steschan data.

While this work began as a simple compilation of church book data it has evolved into a study of the origins and destinations of Josefsdorders. For this purpose data has been freely taken from the family books cited in the references by matching those in the published Banat family books with those in these church records.

One unexpected result of collating the Josefsdorf church book records in this work was the realization, through direct evidence therein, that three families had homesteaded in Castor, Alberta, Canada (Retzler, Schaffner and Wimmer). Through discussions on this point on the Banat LIST further Josefsdorf families could be added (Frank, Hess, Hummel and Rey). Finally, search through an index of Dominion land records at <<http://www.archives.ca/exec/naweb.dll?fs&02011102&e&top&0>> permitted identification of the Josefsdorfers, Peter Hepp, Mathias Stumpf and Wilhelm Dunkle families among these settlers.

The Banat settlers from Josefsdorf in the Castor area of Alberta can be summarized as follows, all living in Twp 39 R 14; West of the 4th meridian;

1. Dunkle Wilhem and wife, Margaret Retzler ex Etschka/Josefsdorf.
2. Frank Josef and wife, Anna Kraemer ex Sanad/Josefsdorf
3. Hepp Peter and wife, Elisabeth Mayer, ex Johannsfeld/Josefsdorf.
4. Hess Georg and wife, Barbara Klug, ex Neuarad/Josefsdorf.
5. Hummel Christian and wife, Katharina Waltner ex Gertianosch/Josefsdorf.
6. Retzler Franz and wife, Anna Friedrich, ex Tschestereg/Josefsdorf.
7. Retzler Michael, son of Franz Retzler.
8. Rey Adam and wife, Elisabeth Klug ex Neuarad/Josefsdorf
9. Schaffner Anton and wife, Magdalena Retzler ex Sigmundfeld/Josefsdorf.
10. Stumpf Mathias and wife, Magdalena Just ex Josefsdorf
11. Wimmer Johann and wife, Katharina Germann, ex Tschestereg/Josefsdorf.

In 1893 seven families of German Banaters, the first of many, moved to Bardarski Geran in Northwestern Bulgaria. These families largely came from Denta, Gertianosch, Homolitz and D Stamora. They followed in the steps of a number of Bulgarian Banater Catholics mainly from Winga, Bulgarische Kolonie and Alt-Beschenowa who returned starting in 1887 to resettle in Bulgaria. By 1936 there were about 90 German Banater families living in Bardarski Geran. Other Bulgarian towns with Banater colonists were Tsarev Brod/Shumen and Gostilya/ Pleven. Between 1941-1943 these German Banat-Bulgarians were resettled in Germany. These included 164 German Banaters from Bardarski Geran and 33 from Gostilya. Jakob Rothschiller took out naturalization papers in New York in 1899. While living in Bismarck, Jakob Rothschiller became president of the North Dakota Citizens Relief Association for Russia. In 1921 he made a passport application to accompany a donation of 800 milk cows to Hungary. He departed Bismarck 3 Oct 1922 and sailed on the Aquitaina, NY to Southhampton, returning 3 Nov 1923. In this 13 month trip to Europe to deliver relief materials he visited Russia, Romania, Germany, Poland and Hungary(Bismarck Herald 5 Nov 1923).

Jakob Rothschiller was appointed postmaster, 22 Oct 1917, in Hirschville PO, Dunn Co ND
